WHS named Project Lead The Way Distinguished School

Last year, local students restored a historic electric vehicle

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

Wabash High School (WHS) recently announced they had been recognized as a 2021-22 Project Lead The Way (PLTW) Distinguished School, said assistant principal Jeff Galley.

Jeff Galley said WHS is one of just 191 high schools in the country "to receive this honor for providing broad access to transformative learning experiences for students through PLTW, computer science, biomedical science and engineering courses." PLTW is a nonprofit organization that serves millions of pre-school to 12th-grade students and teachers in over 12,200 schools across the U.S.

"We are extremely excited and honored to have this recognition. Our PLTW teachers have worked hard to provide a transformative hands-on learning experience for all students; empowering them and developing the skills they need to succeed in today's global economy," said Jeff Galley.

The PLTW Distinguished School recognition honors schools committed to increasing student access, engagement, and achievement in their PLTW programs. To be eligible for the designation, Wabash High School had to meet the following criteria in the 2020-21 school year:

■ Had 25 percent of students or more participate in PLTW High School courses, or of those who participated during the 2020-21 school year, at least 33 percent took two or more PLTW courses during their tenure at the school; will be Father Jay Horning, who is presently at St. Vincent de Paul Church in Fort Wayne. Unger said on the weekend of May 14 and 15, Nkwocha informed St. Bernard parish of his transfer. Unger said Nkwocha was sent to Wabash in early August 2018 from St. Thomas by Bishop Kevin Rhoades. He was born in Nigeria in November 1970, trained at Seat of Wisdom Seminary and ordained a Catholic priest on Aug. 15, 2000. He received his Ph.D. in theology from the University of Notre Dame in 2018. While living in Wabash he was nominated in both The Paper of Wabash County and the Wabash Plain Dealer as the Best Pastor, winning first place in the Wabash Plain Dealer, and second place in The Paper of Wabash County. "During the dark and scary days of COVID-19 in 2020 and 2021, he continued to minister his flock with masses live-streamed and tending the sick and home-bound," said Unger. "During his time at St. Bernard's, Father Levi organized the installation of a new speaker system, a new Listening System, a new 65" TV for the school, a new projector, so that movies and presentations could be shown, and a portable PA system for outdoor events through the funding of several grants. He recently taught the school children two hymns, 'What a Friend We Have in Jesus,' and 'Jesus Loves Me,' awarding cash prizes for the children who memorized both." Unger said Nkwocha will be moving to Elkhart the last week in June. "During that week, St. Bernard's will be introduced to Father Jay Horning, the new pastor of the parish and school," said Unger. "Father Levi will be greatly missed at St. Bernard Church and School, and in the Wabash community for his sound mind and wise counsel, and his uncanny intuition and empathy." This was the most widely-sold electric vehicle in the United States until the Tesla Model S came out in 2012.

■ Offer and had students enrolled in at least three PLTW High School courses; ■ Had strategies and procedures in place that support reasonably proportional representation concerning race, ethnicity, poverty and gender and can support such claims with relevant data. "We are honored to recognize WHS for their unwavering commitment to provide students with an excellent educational experience despite the last two years having been some of the most challenging in recent history for students and educators across the U.S. due to the COVID-19 pandemic," said PTLW interim president Dr. David Dimmett. "WHS should be very proud of their achievements in unlocking their students' potential and equipping them with the knowledge and skills necessary to thrive in life beyond the classroom no matter what career path they choose." Last year, WHS PLTW students had a unique opportunity for some hands-on learning with a piece of electric vehicle history.

In August 2021, the Wabash County Museum acquired a 1980 Comuta-Car. Wabash County Museum executive director Teresa Galley "immediately began brainstorming on how to get it restored." "Eventually, she came upon the idea of having the students in the WHS PLTW Principles of Engineering course do the work. When approached with the idea, the students and teacher jumped at the prospect of bringing a piece of history they never even knew about back to life," said WHS assistant principal Jeff Galley. Jeff Galley said the museum's version is a second generation of the vehicle. "Our goal is to get this little car back on the road, even if it is only in downtown Wabash," said Teresa Galley. "This will be an amazing addition to our vehicle collection that already includes a caboose and a 1971 firetruck." Jeff Galley said this was the most widely-sold electric vehicle in the United States until the Tesla Model S came out in 2012. "With less room than a golf cart and the design of a doorstop, the Comuta-Car line is recognized as the first mass-produced electric vehicle for the general public in the late 1970s and into the early 1980s, manufactured by Commuter Vehicles," said Jeff Galley. "What was originally produced as a solution to the economic and energy crisis issues of the '70s and '80s is today a physical lesson in not only history but how alternative energy can survive the ages and still be impactful decades later." Jeff Galley said when they were approached with the idea, "the students and teacher jumped at the prospect of bringing a piece of history they never even knew about back to life." Jeff Galley said the students are working in class on the electrical needs, components, scheduling and other items the Comuta-Car restoration will require. Jeff Galley said the students will be confronted with the question of whether to build the batteries from scratch or use those obtained over the counter. "This is an item they are studying now and trying to determine what's best," said Jeff Galley. Teresa Galley said one of the challenges the students will face is the improved technology. The vehicle currently uses eight 6-volt batteries to run and a 12-volt battery while it is driving. Jeff Galley said, originally the car had a top speed of about 40 miles with a battery range of 40 miles. Justin Denney, the teacher leading the project, said that his motivator for taking on the project is that the students are far more engaged when they are working to complete a project with a culminating goal. Jeff Galley said students will study a wide range of engineering topics during the PLTW Principles of Engineering course. "Seen as an engineering introduction course they will study mechanisms, the strength of structure and materials, automation, and robotics," said Jeff Galley. "They are learning about the major concepts they will encounter in a post-secondary engineering course of study." Jeff Galley said in 2020, students in the course built an electric bike from scratch, taking a simple bike frame and then building it from the ground up, including the battery, gearboxes, electrical wiring and more. Jeff Galley said this is the first time the class has "worked with community partners which is why this project is so exciting." "Unlike many projects done in school, once completed it finds a shelf to live on but this one will go on living and being used. Years down the road they might see the car and be able to say to their school-aged children, 'I helped make that run,'" said Jeff Galley. For more information on PLTW, visit pltw.org/our-programs/program-recognition. Hold gun makers responsible for marketing dangerous weapons to young people

By marketing their weapons to young people, gun manufacturers are responsible for much of the mayhem in America.

The nation has seen the horrific results play out recently from Buffalo, New York, to Uvalde, Texas, to Chicago over the Memorial Day weekend.

At a Buffalo supermarket, 10 dead, three injured. In an Uvalde elementary school, 21 dead, 17 wounded. In Chicago, 51 shot, nine dead.

The alleged Buffalo shooter is 18; so was the Uvalde shooter. In Chicago, many shooters in the past have been teens. As a nation, we should have no tolerance for efforts to entice young people to obtain deadly weapons.

Just days before the deadly Texas school shooting, manufacturer Daniel Defense posted a photo of a child holding a firearm similar to its semi-automatic rifle model that 18-year-old Salvador Rolando used to kill 19 children and two teachers in Uvalde.

The gun industry has also even used images of toddlers to promote gun ownership, said former Illinois state Sen. Dan Kotowski, chairman of One Aim, a gun safety group.

"They try to start out with the very young," Kotowski said. "That is their intent."

What other industry gets away with marketing dangerous products to young people? Not one.

A manufacturer selling teddy bears has to follow rules about avoiding sharp edges, loose points and flammability. The idea is to make sure the teddy bears are safe, not dangerous. But guns can be as dangerous as manufacturers want to make them. The industry is for the most part unregulated.

The 2005 Protection of Lawful Commerce in Arms Act bars lawsuits against gun manufacturers, with some exceptions. One is an exception for violating state or federal laws governing the marketing or sales of guns. That exception allowed parents of children killed in the 2012 Sandy Hook Elementary School massacre to win a lawsuit against Remington Arms last year. The shooter, Adam Lanza, was 20, and his weapon was advertised as a way to reclaim one's "man card."

Decades ago, gun safety advocates worried about low-quality, cheap and plentiful guns called "Saturday night specials." Today's weapons are far more lethal, including an AR-15-style firearm called the "Urban Super Sniper." An AR-15 is a semiautomatic, civilian version of a military weapon.

Gun manufacturers want to make money by getting the next generation interested in buying guns, but it's not OK to put them in the hands of people too young to use them responsibly. If the manufacturers do, they need to be held liable for their behavior.

In the race for market share, manufacturers decided to develop military-style weapons for citizens, and the more harmful they are, the better.

The result: a citizenry increasingly armed with overtly military-style equipment.

When their weapons turn up at crime scenes, manufacturers should be forced to prove they did everything possible to prevent their guns from falling into the wrong hands. Marketing guns to individuals too young to own them would be a clear violation of that policy.

When a crime gun is recovered, authorities know who made it, unless it is a ghost gun, an untraceable weapon that can be assembled within 15 minutes with no serial numbers or printed on a 3-D printer. Ghost guns are now illegal in Illinois.

Some efforts are underway to reduce violence from guns in the hands of young people.

In California, the state Assembly last week passed a bill opening manufacturers to civil liability for marketing firearms to children and others not legally allowed to possess them. Some U.S. senators are pushing for a Federal Trade Commission investigation into the marketing of military-style firearms to children. Also, the legal age for buying a military-style assault weapon should be raised to 21, just as it is for a handgun.

This must be a national priority. We can't stanch America's bloody epidemic of gun violence overnight, but we can begin to rein it in, step by step.

Ending marketing of guns to young people is a step America should take right now.

Let us ask more of ourselves

On this Memorial Day weekend we set aside time to remember those men and women of whom we asked everything. We asked them to suffer deprivation and pain and ultimately asked that they relinquish all of their tomorrows for us. We asked that they do this so that we could have a Republic – a place ruled by laws, not men, where each of us possess individual value and rights. Here those rights are endowed by our creator – not a king, dictator or emperor.

Michael Hicks

For such an endowment as this, it is unsurprising that so many of our fellow citizens would be willing to give their lives. Nor is it surprising that so many men and women continue to place themselves in harm's way. This Republic always attracted more than our fair share of heroes.

What saddens me on Memorial Day weekend is how little we ask of ourselves in return for their sacrifice.

For 247 years Americans worked hard, in unbearable heat, frigid cold, and in lonely places so we may craft a more perfect Union. Sometimes that work happens on the battlefield, but more often the work of our democracy happens in factories, high school classrooms, city council meetings, synagogues, church picnics, courtrooms, and a million other settings where we talk, make decisions and offer opinions.

Offering an opinion on an issue is easy, almost effortless. It asks nothing of us, places no demands upon our conscience or reason. In most instances, offering an opinion is a harmless exercise in civility. Opining upon fine weather, a cute dog or an attractive hairstyle is easy and pleasant, but it won't help us craft a more perfect Union.

The challenges that are before us today demand much more of us than our opinions. They demand mastery of facts and trends, the ability to discern truth and the capacity to learn and adapt as facts change. It may even require us to change our minds. All of this is far, far more difficult than simply sharing an opinion. Still, it is Memorial Day, and none of us now living can complain of the difficulty of the task.

I propose we ask more of ourselves than simply have an opinion. One way to begin is to adopt the Ideological Turing test to every issue upon which we wish to speak. This test is easy, and rests upon Alan Turing's test for computer intelligence. If a person can have a conversation with a computer and not detect that it is a computer, the computer has demonstrated human intelligence. Applied to ideology or public policy, the Ideological Turing test simply requires that you be able to explain and defend either side of an issue without the listener knowing your personal position.

This is deep and difficult work. It means listening to news outlets you might otherwise shun, reading material whose work you believe you detest and, most importantly, accessing facts of which you would otherwise be ignorant. The process of taking seriously those with whom you disagree is a powerful tool. At the very least it will help you argue your side more effectively, but there is greater benefit.

This process should lead you to understand that differences of opinion often happen in good faith. Many people with whom you disagree on means might share your ultimate goals. Also, you might find that they are decent, honest, hardworking people who like dogs and want what is best for their community and family. These discoveries are liberating when you need to search for compromise.

You might also learn that there is some truth to their argument. No matter how beguiled you may be by your own position, there is always some truth elsewhere. It just takes work to uncover it. In the end, finding these truths might allow you to modify your opinion or stance, or at least work to fix it up a bit.

Of course, you might find the other side is wrong, employs bad data, and lacks discernment of critical facts. You might even find that the other side of a debate is filled with scoundrels whose interests are narrow and ugly. All of this should make you more confident in your position. But, discovery about the other side is only part of the benefit for this purposeful open-mindedness. The real benefit is what you learn about yourself and your allies.

In fully understanding the other side of a debate, you will inevitably find weaknesses in your own side. You'll encounter bad facts, poor discernment of what is true and even scoundrels and hacks. Everyone has these folks on their side of any issue. It is best to know who they are so that others don't con.

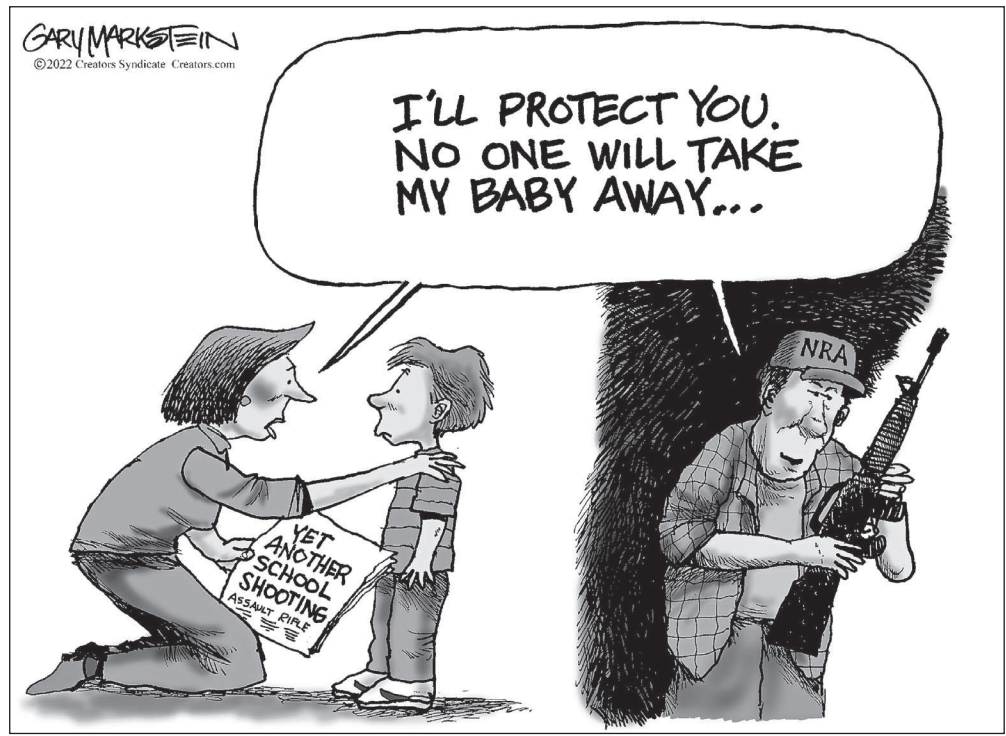

One final benefit of the Ideological Turing Test is that it should cause us to hold fewer opinions, or at least facilitate the sharing of them. It should make us more humble regarding our personal epistemology – ways of determining truth. It might even help us grow as individuals. In my faith, as in most others, discernment is a central pillar of personal growth. I know that when I err, it is almost always because I did not have command of facts.

My argument here is not to abandon principle, nor to change opinions. Nor do I wish to lessen disagreement. James Madison was correct in arguing that the multiplicity of factions is important to ensuring there is not tyranny of a majority. Our nation thrives on robust disagreement and vigorous debate. The goal of this is to change minds, rather than diminish or belittle them. Disrespect would be antithetical to the goals of democratic debate. We should view with suspicion the politicians who have abandoned their desire to change minds. That has no good ending.

Today's environment for public debate may not be the worst we've seen, but it is unsettling and unhealthy. It lessens our civic comity and is unworthy of the great personal sacrifice so many made to ensure our ability to speak and write freely. We should all have some interest in its improvement.

My goal in proposing that we all adopt this Ideological Turing Test is so that the quality of our disagreements honor the sacrifice that so many have made to preserve our Republic. It seems a small thing to ask ourselves when we remember those of whom we asked everything.

No consequences for FBI agents whose inaction, delay put others at risk and betrayed trust

On May 26, another sad chapter in the reprehensible treatment of gymnasts at the hands of Larry Nassar came to an end when the U.S. Department of Justice declined to pursue criminal charges against two former FBI special agents in the Indianapolis office.

When these brave gymnasts came forward in 2015, risking shame and blame, the FBI office in Indianapolis did not believe them. Meanwhile, Nassar sexually assaulted an estimated 120 women and children while the investigation stalled.

Now, there will be no consequences for those agents, whose inaction and delay put others at risk, and betrayed the trust of an entire community.

It took years for McKayla Maroney, Simone Biles, Maggie Nichols and Ally Raisman, along with scores of other gymnasts abused by Larry Nassar and those affiliated with USA

Gymnastics, to be believed.

At the Indiana Coalition to End Sexual Assault and Human Trafficking, we know that the number one reason survivors don't report is that they don't think they will be believed. And in this case, here in our home state, they weren't.

Nationally, 63 percent of sexual assaults are not reported to law enforcement. Rape is the most underreported crime, according to the National Sexual Violence Resource Center. Statistics show that like the gymnasts, survivors either know or are acquainted with, the individual who assaults or abuses them.

The stigma of the crime prevents survivors from coming forward. What can we do?

Believe victims. Nationally, false reporting is between two and 10 percent. Ninety to 98 percent of survivors are telling the truth. In Indiana, one in five women has been sexually assaulted. Indiana ranks fourth in the nation for reported rapes among high school girls and sixth for high school boys. If Olympic gymnasts aren't safe, then who is?

Believing victims takes all of us. It starts at home, with open and frequent conversations about consent, and healthy and respectful relationships. You can learn how to be an effective bystander. You can talk to your employer about workplace sexual harassment policies. You can contact your federal and local elected officials to advocate for survivors. And, you can support initiatives that empower survivors.

At the Indiana Coalition to End Sexual Assault and Human Trafficking, we are tireless in ensuring survivors are believed and supported. Our mission is to provide training and support to recognize the warning signs and create a culture of care for young people, so this never happens again.

Let this moment in time renew our efforts to protect survivors and hold abusers accountable.

Let's start by believing our survivors.

2022 Honeywell Summer Arts Camps return in person

STAFF REPORT

The 2022 Honeywell Summer Arts Camps have officially begun and for the first time since 2019, all are offered at full scale, according to digital marketing specialist Kaitlynn Still.

“A broad range of camps in both visual arts and theater offers something for everyone and every age,” said Still.

Visual arts camps include a S.T.E.A.M. camp for grades K-1; printmaking and fabric dying for grades two through four, watercolor and “shrinky dink” creation for grades five and six; and sketching and skill drills for grades seven through 12. Each camp is a week-long and meets on weekdays from 9 a.m. to noon.

“Three different theater camps will each stage a musical,” said Still. Grades one through four will perform ‘The Pajama Party,’ a show about the joys of bedtime; grades five through eight will perform ‘Mary Poppins Jr.’ featuring everyone’s favorite English nanny; and grades nine through 12 will perform the much-anticipated ‘Matilda the Musical,’ the hit Broadway show based on Roald Dahl’s story about the power of imagination and a girl who dreams of a better life. Matilda was planned for the summer of 2020 but delayed due to COVID.”

Rehearsals run weekdays from Monday, June 6 through Wednesday, June 15 for “The Pajama Party” and weekdays from Monday, June 6 through Friday, June 24 for “Mary Poppins Jr.” and “Matilda.”

“Honeywell camps strive to provide enriching arts experiences that students and families look forward to each year. The visual arts camps explore a range of mediums such as building mosaics, hammering flower-print cards, or learning the Japanese dyeing technique of Shibori,” said Still.

Lead sponsorship for the camps is provided by Halderman Farm Management with additional support provided by the Community Foundation of Wabash County.

“Honeywell camps provide focused time to do projects that might be too involved to do in school,” says Carolyn Stoner, Honeywell’s Director of Arts. “Our goal is to offer an elevated arts experience.”

“The theater camps offer an elevated experience as well, with fully-staged productions that perform in Honeywell’s state-of-the-art Ford Theater. Students work with the same stage crew that runs the touring Broadway shows that come to Honeywell, such as Blue Man Group and ‘An American in Paris,’” said Still.

Still said arts education has long been touted as an essential building block for success in adulthood and is especially impactful for at-risk youth.

“Being able to perform in the Ford Theater is about as professional as you can get,” said education media manager and director of “Matilda,” Jessica Keffaber. “We’re doing professional lighting, we’re doing professional sound, and giving students as close to a professional experience as we can.”

Still said for students who aspire for a career on the stage and even those who don’t, performing at the Ford Theater is “nothing short of magical.”

“It’s such a nice theater,” said Wabash High School senior Annie Cole, who has been performing in the Honeywell’s summer theater camps since she was in third grade. “It’s just crazy that our town that is so small has this incredible space we get to use.”

Still said a recent National Education Association (NEA) study of at-risk youth found those with arts education had better academic outcomes, higher career goals, and were more civically engaged than those without.

“The arts are so important,” said Keffaber. “For some of my participating students, this is what they live for. The theater is their thing and this allows them to do what they love.”

Still said for any student who might not have found their passion in academics or sports, the arts make a critical impact, building confidence and resilience, honing the muscle that helps us persist in learning something new even if it’s initially hard.

Cole said she credits summer theater with making her a more confident, outgoing person.

“When I first started, it was a good way to meet new people. I am an incredibly shy person. It helped me become more of myself, figure out who I am, and be confident,” she said.

Still said the multi-talented Cole will head to Butler in the fall and plans to study actuarial science.

“I’m a big math person,” said Cole.

Still said Cole and her future roommate, also a theater-lover, have already decided they’ll attend all the shows at Butler and audition for any they can.

“You can watch her on stage this summer before she leaves. Cole and her peers have been waiting to perform ‘Matilda’ for three years, so it’s sure to be a passion-filled performance,” said Still.

“The Pajama Party” performance will take place at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 15 in Legacy Hall at the Honeywell Center. Productions of “Mary Poppins Jr.” and “Matilda” will take place at the Ford Theater at 5 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. respectively, on Friday, June 24 and Saturday, June 25.

chair Chad Harris said he had done just that.

With the race now competitive, here’s a look at both candidates.

John T. Hargenrader

John T. Hargenrader said he has nine adult children and “many” grandchildren. He is an engineer that has worked in industry for over 35 years. He has resided in Wabash County for a little over two years now and previously lived in Brighton, Michigan and South Bend.

Hargenrader said he is “a social liberal and economic conservative.”

“Wabash County has a rich history and many local attractions. It also has one of the highest income tax rates in the state. Wabash suffers in the attraction of new jobs leading to higher incomes, and a lack of a long-term development plan. While much of the state is seeing renewed industrial development, Wabash is stagnant. We must take aggressive action in the post-COVID-19 era, to establish a new vision. The Wabash County Council of today is predominantly focused on year-over-year budget management. This under-serves the county,” said Hargenrader.

Hargenrader said local communities “require engaged leadership, with the background and experience

John T. Hargenrader has resided in Wabash County for a little over two years now and previously lived in Brighton, Michigan and South Bend.

Kyle Bowman has worked and resided in Wabash County his entire life.

to manage services, craft budgets and attract investment.”

“I believe I can bring those qualities, with a vision of opportunity, better jobs and a higher standard of living for our new and younger residents,” said Hargenrader. “We must make county government more efficient to lower our income tax rates to attract new residents. We must create a community that is a desirable place to work, grow, raise families, start businesses and even retire. From those I’ve met, most our the local graduates see their future outside Wabash and the surrounding communities. We can change that. My priorities will be on a long-term economic strategy, leveraging the proposed Imaging One 85 draft Plan. This would align with the Indiana State Economic Development Corporation and other interests to attract new high-tech and industrial employers. Please consider, regardless of your party affiliation, that the County Council is a non-partisan function. Vote based on experience, qualifications and willingness to affect growth for the better, and cast your vote for me in November.”

Kyle Bowman

Bowman said he has worked and resided in Wabash County his entire life.

“My wife and I have three younger children, and we have also been foster parents for over six years now. I have a passion for serving our community and a desire to influence generational change among our youth,” said Bowman.

Bowman said he is a “fiscal and social conservative.”

“During my time on council, we have moved from not being able to cash flow bi-weekly payroll into a sizable general fund cash balance,” said Bowman. “The credit goes to current as well as prior serving council members and our county staff for diligently stewarding your tax dollars. This improved financial position greatly increased our bond rating allowing us to secure long-term jail financing for a historically low rate of 2.58 percent as well as providing a cash reserve for its debt service.”

Bowman said recent business investment at the Wabash Arc Light Business Park “was achieved by supporting current Wabash County business owners that we’re able to draw outside investment in partnership for these innovative ventures.”

“I remain committed to supporting our local businesses while building an attractive environment for new employers,” said Bowman. “The Wabash County Council was established to be the fiscal body of our county. As a certified public accountant (CPA), with a bachelor’s in finance and a master’s degree focused on accounting, I have the technical training and experience to continue assisting our local government with the complex state accounting and tax structures. As a local business owner raising his family within Wabash County, I have a zeal to retain and attract younger residents while supporting those that choose to work, live, invest, and retire in our great county. I would appreciate your support and vote this November.”

Wabash varsity baseball loses steam to No. 1 Carroll

The Apaches struck out 12 times in their semifinal sectional loss

By CLAY MAXFIELD

Wabash Plain Dealer Freelance Reporter

After a season in which Wabash's varsity baseball team put together 19-8 year including a first-place finish in the Three Rivers Conference (TRC), the Apaches' postseason run came to a close on Saturday, May 28 after they fell to no. 1 in Class 2A Carroll.

Offensively, the Apaches couldn't find a way to get it going against the Cougars when they mustered just three hits on the day.

"Carroll is pretty good, they wouldn't be ranked number one if they weren't pretty good," said Wabash head coach Jack Holley. "The (Will) Eldridge kid, he's the real deal and he showed it again today. We just didn't put the ball in play enough to win this game. We started out good and then they got the momentum and we just couldn't get it back."

Wabash drew first blood when Trevor Daughtry stole home on a passed ball and put the Apaches up with an early one-run lead but the following inning Wabash went three up and three down with consecutive strikeouts.

In the bottom of the third, Carroll connected on a pitch that went to left field for a two-run homer and the Cougar lead.

From that point, Carroll never looked back as Daughtry led the Apaches with one hit and one run batted in (RBI).

The Apaches struck out 12 times in their semifinal sectional loss while Carroll registered 11 hits.

Despite the loss, Wabash looks to be competitive in the 2023 season as they return the vast majority of their talent from this season apart from four seniors.

"The underclassmen, we got them to sit there and talk and look at those seniors because that's going to be them whether it's next year or the three after. We are still fairly young. ... If you look at our line-up, the majority of our infield, we're sophomores. Then our whole outfield will be back," Holley said while mentioning the difficulty of replacing their four departing seniors.

"It's hard to replace any senior. (Chayden) Beeks is going to be hard to replace, Colten Learned came on towards the end of the season. Leadership of Blake Smith is unbelievable. ... Jared Brooks has been phenomenal for us all year."

Wabash returns their three top leaders in batting percentage next season in Brayten Eis, Andrew Dillon and Trevor Daughtry while Dillon also comes back for his senior season campaign on the mound after averaging a 2.69 earned run average this season.

Carroll went on to score two runs or more in the final four innings of play while Wabash mustered one final run of the game in the top of the seventh off of a fly ball to left field by Chayden Beeks.

Squires varsity baseball unable to keep pace with Whitko

Manchester finished their season with a record of 8-18

By CLAY MAXFIELD
Wabash Plain Dealer Freelance Reporter

Manchester’s varsity baseball team had their season cut short on Saturday, May 28 after facing off against the Whitko Wildcats in the semi-finals of sectional 37.

The Squires finished their season with a record of 8-18 while placing seventh in the Three Rivers Conference.

For Manchester, the early lead that Whitko took provided the Squires with an uphill battle throughout the remainder of the contest said head coach Jack Rupley.

“We kind of started out in a hole just a little bit,” Rupley said. “Evan Martynowicz just had trouble finding the strike zone in the first inning, gave up three runs. ... We kind of dug ourselves a hole in the very beginning. We came back and we got two but we just struggled putting hits together.”

After two walks for Whitko’s first scores of the game, the Wildcats scored their third consecutive run with a ground out to second base while Manchester struggled to get runners to home in the bottom of the first after leaving three runners on base.

A single to left field for Whitko in the following inning put Manchester in an early five-run hole.

Coming into the playoffs, Manchester won three of their final regular-season outings including routs in a double header over Central Noble along with an easy victory over North Miami.

However, Manchester had trouble getting their bats together at times throughout the season after they shut out or ten-run ruled a combined 10 games.

Despite their struggles at times during their ‘22 campaign, the future is bright for the Squires as they return four juniors next season as well as a freshman that saw heavy playing time this season.

Ethan Hendryx played second base and shortstop this season for the Squires.

The Squires got on the board in the bottom of the second when Garrett Sites singled on a ground ball, cutting Manchester’s deficit.

Sites finished the season with a team-high batting average of .389 while Ethan Hendryx and Evan Martynowicz rounded out the top three Squires in batting averages.

Martynowicz finished with three hits and one run batted in (RBI) for the Squires while Sites tallied a hit and an RBI.

Despite the end of the season, Rupley believes that the Squires have a core of talent that can be built around.

“We had a stretch where we were playing pretty well except we’d have one inning where we’d kind of fall apart, couldn’t quite dig ourselves out of it but you know, we just had trouble towards the end putting hits together. ... There’s some good young talent that’s there and if those kids can come around the next couple of years, they can be pretty good,” he said.

Martynowicz finished the game with a line drive to right field while the Squires’ final two runs of the game came in the bottom of the seventh inning but Manchester’s comeback bid ultimately fell short in the end.

With a group of Martynowicz, Sites, Martin and Hendryx, Rupley is anxious to get back on the field for the Squires.

“Evan Martynowicz, he was our best pitcher all year long and he’s only a sophomore,” Rupley said. “Gavin

Celtics were resilient in Game 1; Warriors now must respond

By TIM REYNOLDS
AP Basketball Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — In Game 1, Boston showed its resilience.

In Game 2, Golden State gets a chance to answer.

Over the last two months, no teams in the NBA have shown more of a bounce-back ability than the Celtics and the Warriors. The latest example came Thursday night, when the Celtics went on a dazzling 48-18 run down the stretch to erase a 15-point deficit and win Game 1 of the NBA Finals 120-108.

It was the fifth double-digit comeback by Boston in these playoffs. The only team with more is Golden State, with six such rallies this postseason.

Now, it’s the Warriors’ turn. They haven’t dropped back-to-back games in more than two months, and – although it should be noted the trio has played in only 20 games together – they have yet to lose consecutive games this season with Stephen Curry, Draymond Green and Klay Thompson all in the lineup.

“This series,” Curry said after Game 1, “is just getting started.”

The Warriors know they let an opportunity slip away in Game 1. Boston’s big rally — from down 15 late in the third to up by 15 late in the fourth — represented the fourth time this season Golden State had lost a home game after leading by at least 15 points.

The others: the Warriors led Memphis by 19 in the first half on Oct. 28, were up by 16 midway through the third quarter against Denver on Feb. 16, and led Dallas by 21 points in the third – and 19 with 9:59 left – before falling on Feb. 27.

Golden State is 5-0 since the start of March after losses; Boston, incidentally, is 8-0 over that span after losses. But Golden State’s penchant for getting back on track quickly did serve as a silver lining following the Game 1 loss.

Game 2 isn’t a must-win for Golden State, technically.

But the reality is another loss Sunday would put the Warriors in serious trouble, against a Boston team that has been forged by fire throughout these playoffs.

Consider their path: They swept their way through a Brooklyn team led by Kevin Durant and Kyrie Irving in Round 1, outlasted Giannis Antetokounmpo and defending champion Milwaukee over seven games in Round 2, then won another Game 7 — this one on the road — over Miami to claim the Eastern Conference title.

“It’s hard to win in this league, especially in the playoffs,” Boston’s Jaylen Brown said. “Any given night, things could go differently, but a good team is able to respond. A good team is able to put their best foot forward each and every night. ... We’ve been through a lot. We’ve learned a lot over the years, and now the stage is at its brightest, we’ve got to apply everything that we’ve learned into these moments.”

That’s what happened in Game 1. Even when things looked bleakest, Boston relied on its experience in such moments.

The Celtics rallied from 17 down to beat Brooklyn on April 20, from 11 down – in the third quarter – to beat Milwaukee on May 9, erased an early 10-point deficit on the way to blowing out the Bucks in Game 7 of that series on May 15, then came back from an early 10-point hole to roll past Miami in Game 2 of the East finals on May 19.

Then came Thursday, when the Cardiac Celtics struck again.

Game 2 provides the Warriors a chance to show their experience.

Faux friendship has an ominous downside

DEAR AMY: "Mary" and I were acquaintances in college. We didn't talk for years after graduating but would see each other sometimes at bars and say hello.

Amy Dickinson
Ask Amy

people, posting them all over social media, the relationship ends, then she starts up with someone new.

She has also behaved unethically in her profession.

Almost every weekend now, Mary asks me to go out drinking.

I never message her first. I've been making up excuses because I don't feel comfortable telling her that I find her actions problematic.

In between texts asking to hang out, she would tell me how good of a friend I am and how much she cares about me.

Amy, I would see this person once every few months.

Last weekend, I finally left her text as having been "read" but I haven't answered. Just now, I just got a text from her telling me she misses me.

I'm scared to tell her that I don't want to be her friend.

I don't know how she'd react, and there's a good chance I would see her around my small city. Should I continue not to respond to her and hope she finally gets the hint?

— No Chaos
DEAR NO CHAOS: If you are genuinely afraid of "Mary's" reaction to any statement from you, then yes — I'd suggest a continued light ghosting. She will text you, you will read her texts, but you won't respond unless you feel the need to answer a question. (For instance, if she asks you to meet her at a bar at a certain time, you should respond: "Sorry — I can't make it. Hope you have a good time.")

If things come to a head and you feel boxed into a corner, then keep your statement simple: "I don't party like I used to, but I'm sure I'll see you around town at some point. Take good care of yourself."

DEAR AMY: I recently visited my mother-in-law in her home.

It was a nice and cordial visit except that I think she called me a liar without so much as saying those words.

I was in her kitchen cooking a meal for her and other family members when she stated: "Do you know how the silverware got mixed up in the drawers? Not that I care, but I was just wondering."

I told her: "No, I'm not aware of how that happened."

Then she said, "Well, if you didn't do it, I wonder who did? I know that 'Susan' (her daughter who had visited the previous month) didn't do it."

I just let the subject drop, but then started thinking: Did she just accuse me of lying?

Am I making too much of this? I don't want to bring this matter up with my husband (her son), but it is certainly bothering me. — Mixed-up Drawer in Michigan

DEAR MIXED-UP: You may have heard of the "non-denial denial," brought into popular culture during the Watergate era. This refers to denying an accusation without actually or specifically denying it: ("That doesn't sound like something I would do...")

Your mother-in-law's comment falls into a classic mother-in-law category: The non-accusation accusation.

Of course this bothers you! And yes, you should do your best to drop it.

DEAR AMY: May I weigh in on the question from "Bay Area Stepmom Cook" the woman who refused to leave onions out of food, even though her son-in-law had an aversion to onions?

I am a retired professional chef.

Cooking is the art of making food delicious to other people. A true artist (and mature human being) rises to meet challenges with zest.

Many people have potentially lethal allergies, religious taboos, health concerns or simple aversions and preferences that should be respected.

The artist in the kitchen — and the generous host — will encounter ingredient changes with the joy of triumphing via creativity. There is a proverb, "A guest is the jewel on the cushion of hospitality."

It is also an unappetizing idea to start an ego war in your family. — Bon Appetit!

Mary Birnbaum, Boston

DEAR MARY: This question continues to receive a robust (zestful?) response.

This speaks to the importance all of us attach not only to food and nutrition, but to notions of hospitality and generosity.

Thank you so much for your sensitive and wise response.

NOTICE OF ADOPTION OF PRELIMINARY DETERMINATION

Notice is hereby given pursuant to Indiana Code § 6-1.1-20-3.5 that the Board of School Trustees (the "Board") of Metropolitan School District of Wabash County (the "School Corporation") did, on May 31, 2022, make a preliminary determination to issue bonds and enter into a lease agreement (the "Lease") for the (i) acquisition of real estate and construction of a new high school, (ii) renovation and repurposing of the Northfield Jr./Sr. High School and Southwood Jr./Sr. High School (collectively, the "Project"). The Lease will be for a maximum term of 22 years with a maximum annual Lease rental of $10,400,000. The maximum annual Lease rental has been estimated based upon an estimated principal amount of bonds of $115,000,000, estimated interest rates ranging from 1.00% to 6.00%, and total estimated interest costs of $71,000,000.

As required by Indiana Code § 6-1.1-20-3.5(b)(1), the following information was available to the public at the public hearings on the preliminary determination: (i) the School Corporation's current and projected annual debt service payments divided by the net assessed value of taxable property within the School Corporation, which is 1.31%; and (ii) the sum of the School Corporation's outstanding long term debt plus the outstanding long term debt of other taxing units that include any other territory of the School Corporation divided by the net assessed value of taxable property within the School Corporation, which is 3.38%.

The School Corporation's current debt service levy is $1,947,829, and the current rate is $0.2561. After the School Corporation enters into the proposed Lease and the bonds are issued, the gross debt service levy will increase by a maximum of $10,400,000 and the gross debt service rate will increase by a maximum of $0.8300. However, as existing obligations mature, the anticipated net increase to the Debt Service Fund tax rate is expected to be $0.5417 above the current rate. The estimated amount of the School Corporation's debt service levy and rate that will result during the following ten years if the School Corporation enters into the lease and issues the bonds, after considering any changes that will occur to the debt service levy and rate during that period on account of any outstanding bonds or lease obligations that will mature or terminate during that period, is as follows:

Year	Estimated Total Debt Service Levy	Estimated Total Debt Service Rate
2023	1,519,011	0.1763
2024	7,507,705	0.8335
2025	7,894,002	0.8338
2026	8,210,300	0.8337
2027	8,553,606	0.8331
2028	8,756,433	0.8333
2029	8,855,738	0.8333
2030	9,005,997	0.8333
2031	9,196,380	0.8332
2032	9,464,137	0.8325

The Project involves the opening of new school facility space. The School Corporation expects to annually incur an increase of $250,000 to operate such new facility space. The purpose of the Lease is to provide for the Project.

If a valid petition pursuant to Indiana Code § 6-1.1-20-3.5 is received within 30 days from the first publication of this notice, the proposed debt service or Lease payments must be approved in an election on a local public question held under Indiana Code § 6-1.1-20-3.6.

SURVEYOR'S REPORT

The record descriptions used in this survey were found by research completed by Rusty W. Logan at the Offices of the Wabash County Recorder. The purpose of this survey is to perform an ALTA/NSPS Land Title Survey, 2021 Minimum Standard Detail Requirements, on the D & J Radabaugh, Inc. Property that is described in Deed Volume 306, Page 249 as per the request of Mr. Jeff Carter of Carter Engineering Consultants, Inc. Survey data shown hereon is on a local ground coordinate system. The bearings have been based on a previous survey as noted below. (Bearing and distance relationships to found monumentation on the adjoining properties is shown on the attached plat for the purpose of establishing a history of monumentation; however, this plat does not represent a survey of said adjoining properties.) There may be differences with deed dimensions when compared with measured dimensions along the boundary lines shown hereon. In cases where the magnitude of these differences is less than the Theoretical Uncertainty stated in the following report and less than the uncertainty identified for the reference monumentation discussed in the following report, the differences may be considered insignificant and are shown only for the purposes of mathematical closure and are therefore not discussed below. When such differences are greater than said uncertainties or are the result of title discrepancies, they are generally discussed in more detail below as may be necessary for clarity of the lines established or reestablished this survey. Information regarding record easement, and other documents recovered during the course of this survey are shown hereon; however, this survey does not represent a title search by this surveyor, but was prepared with the benefit of a title commitment prepared by Metz Title Company, Inc., issuing agent for First American Title Insurance Company, dated November 22, 2021 with a Commitment Number of MTC0711526. Easements, restrictions and rights-of-way of record on this property may exist that are not shown hereon. Every survey, plat, or document of record reviewed and considered as a part of this survey is noted below or on the attached Plat. Other documents may exist that would affect this parcel. The within plat and survey were prepared based upon both, our research and that completed by Metz Title Company of the public records to determine the current deed of record for source of title for the subject tract, adjoiners, and easements, and is therefore subject to any statement of facts revealed by examination of prior deeds and other documents.

NOWADAYS DADS

This Fathers' Day, consider some of the qualities of a new father. New fathers not only have a new addition to their family; they share a more hands-on role in parenting than the father of a previous generation. Gone are the days of dad pacing the floor in the waiting room; he is right there in the delivery room. Sleep deprived dads share in the day-to-day duties of new parenting - getting up in the middle of the night, changing diapers, feeding baby. A new dad is an important part of the team. As you worship with your family this Father's Day, remember your own special dad, and thank your Father in Heaven for him!
